

A Thanksgiving Editorial Striving for Something More

By Bruce Catton

SEED of that happy phenomenon, Thanksgiving, was sown back in the legendary days of our earliest settlers when, around the third Thursday of one cold, snowy November, they came to the conclusion that their half a loaf was better than none—and gathered to praise the thought.

By grace of public proclamation and a national weakness for turkey, that earnest little beginning has grown into a custom of sturdy proportions.

And as a custom, it is a good one—so appropriate, in fact, that it stirs conjecture of what might happen if we made it a year-round proposition.

Imagine all the cliques and classes, all the social and economic subdivisions of the nation giving up their private ambitions in order to keep the Thanksgiving spirit at high tide for, say, 12 whole months.

Strife and turmoil would disappear magically. The labor wars would fold up and collapse; there would be no more high tax worries, no more carping at Nazis and Communists. There would be no concern over Japan's war on China, or the high cost of living, or the neighbor's roving chickens, or Siwash's fifth football defeat of the year. Everybody simply would be too grateful for the status quo.

A POWERFUL TEAM

Big Dallas High School Has Lost But 2 Games This Season

As a prelude to the final football game of the season here Thursday between the Hope High School team and St. Joseph High of Dallas, a game between members of Lawrence Hamilton's junior grid team will clash at Hartman Stadium starting at 1 p. m.

All persons who wish to see the double-header will be admitted for the price of 50 cents, providing tickets are purchased before Thursday morning.

All tickets on Thanksgiving Day will sell at 75 cents. Tickets went on sale Tuesday morning at Hope Confectionery and Jacks Newsstand. They will remain at 50 cents until Wednesday night.

The battle between the Hope High School team and Dallas will begin promptly at 2:30 p. m. Quarters of the junior grid clash will be cut short to allow Hope and Dallas squads ample time to take the field for warm-up exercises.

A holiday crowd of several thousand persons is expected to witness the final game of the season and to witness nine regulars of the Bobcat team making their final stand of their prep careers.

The Dallas Team

The St. Joseph grid squad is coached by Pat Miller, a Fordham University graduate and former football star of that school. Coach Miller has had a long career.

Following graduation, he coached Cathedral High School of Philadelphia, then went to Loyola College of Baltimore where he remained several years.

His next assignment was coach and player of the Potomac professional grid team. In 1935 he became head coach of Wake Forest college. That year his team defeated North Carolina, 21 to 6, after North Carolina had tied Auburn for the Southern Conference championship. A year later he became head coach of St. Joseph High School of Dallas. Coach Miller uses the Notre Dame system.

His team will leave Dallas early Wednesday morning and will spend Wednesday night in Texarkana, driving to Hope Thursday morning.

St. Joseph's Record

At St. Joseph High School, Coach Miller has turned out winning football

In plainer words, life would be just too nice, too sweetly smooth to be real in a modern era which requires lots of realism—and the ability to fight back when it's called for.

Today's human beings aren't striving merely for enough corn and meat to carry them through a hard winter. They have to contend, as well, with the arbitrary forms and prescriptions of a welter of new political, economic and social schemes which may change the mode of life virtually over a week-end.

Perhaps that's why we can't spend a whole year as disciples of the credo of gratitude. Like those early pioneers, we have other duties that monopolize our attention. Three hundred and sixty-four days of the year, we are striving to keep our balance and our jobs through the confusion that has become the hallmark of the first half of the 20th century.

Keeping that level head through the depression deeps and the weird aftermaths of the depression has required all the balance and the precision of judgment and discernment the nation could muster.

But we did remain sane, and the nation is still intact. There can be no gloating until many still hungry persons are fed and clothed, but in the meantime, Americans have proved to themselves that they can take it on the chin, and they have every right to be thankful for that.

Hope District Shows Gain of 50 Per Cent During Last Year

At a meeting of the Hope district committee of the Tex-Ark division of the Boy Scouts of America held at the city hall Monday night officers for the coming year were elected and a report of the work of the past year discussed.

Scout Executive W. H. McMullins of Texarkana, who made the report of last year's Boy Scout work in this country, stated that the district showed a gain in membership of approximately 50 per cent, closing the year with five troops of Scouts and one Cub Pack, enrolling a total of more than 120 boys. His report showed that Hope had shown a greater interest in the Scouting program during the past year and that the district had the largest representation of any in the Council in attendance at the National Scout Jamboree at Washington, D. C., last July.

In discussing plans for next year Scout Executive McMullins urged that this district enroll additional boys to bring the number of active Scouts to at least 200; that at least one unit of Scoutmasters' Training School be held here this year; that a District camp be held; that a Scoutmasters' Club be organized; that an effort be made to

Anti-Lynching Bill Put Off for Time

Progress on Farm Bill, But Wage and Hour Measure Checked

WASHINGTON —(P)—The senate went to work on long-range farm legislation Tuesday after side-tracking the anti-lynching bill.

As it did so, administration leaders—trying to push forward with President Roosevelt's program on another front—abandoned hope of getting the wages and hours bill from the house rules committee.

The committee has refused since last summer to let the house consider the labor measure.

During the day a subcommittee agreed tentatively to complete revision of the corporate tax system.

Charge Woman's Blow Kills Child

Girl, 19, Accused of Striking Tot, 5, Who Teased Her

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. —(P)—Judge Harry S. McDevitt Tuesday ordered Mary K. O'Connor, 19, physical education student, brought before him to determine whether she should continue to be held in custody of Philadelphia detectives in their investigation of the slaying of Nancy Glenn, 5, last Labor day.

Detective Captain John Murphy said Monday night Miss O'Connor told him she struck the girl and knocked her down when she became angry at her teasing. Miss O'Connor left her for dead, face down in a puddle, according to the captain.

The autopsy revealed water and mud in the child's lungs.

5th Skip Tracer Article Tells of Some Fraud Rings

Once There Was a Man Who Had a Substitute for Gasoline—

FIZZ, BUT NO FIRE

And Then There Was the Case of "Expanding Business"

The old-time confidence man, a bit stream-lined now, is still skipping merrily around the countryside, duping business men and swindling business houses. Some of his more interesting frauds are told here in the fifth of a series of six articles taken from the real-life files of the Skip Tracers Co. in New York City.

By DICK MCCANN
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

"No gas—just two cans of water," said the driver of the big, shiny new car, "and put it in the gas tank."

"In the gas tank?" Old Slim knew that he hadn't heard right.

"Yeah—in the gas tank, and hurry," said the driver.

The ancient proprietor of the little wayside gas station shrugged his shoulders and shuffled off to get the water. In the gas tank! Hmmmph... must be crazy, or drunk, maybe.

But it wasn't Old Slims auto to worry and he poured the water into the tank. "Hey, don't screw the top on yet, Pop—wait a minute." The driver had a small pill box in his hand. He took two tablets from it and dropped them into the tank.

The water gurgled and phizzed and bubbled.

Too Good To Be True

"You mean—you mean," and slim was pop-eyed with amazement, "you don't need no gasoline? That there car will run on them things?"

The men exchanged amusing glances. "Sure thing, Pop," said the driver, stepping on the starter. The engine coughed and grumbled and settled to a soft purr. "See? They do it, Slim."

"Gosh, mister," and Slim was almost shaking with the wonder of it all, "but could you gimme some of them things—I mean sell me some?"

"No, Pop—you see, they're not on the market yet..."

"Just a couple?"

"Well, all right," said the driver, reluctantly. "I suppose I'll be all right, huh, Jim?" But it'll cost you a lot, Pop. I'll give you what I've got left in this box for $200."

"I got it! I got it! Not with me but I got it up to the house. I'll get it. You wait—right here—won't be long—thanks—be right back," and Slim was running to get the money.

Then Rude Realization

It was only about an hour later that old Slim knew he could've gotten the $200 combustion capsules down to Doc Warren's in town for 25 cents a dozen.

Combustion capsules? Precious substitute for gasoline? They were nothing but headache pills. And after he had put two of them in an enraged customer's water-filled gas tank, Slim took the rest to try to relieve his headache.

"So you can see that the old confidence man is still roaming around the countryside," says Daniel Eisenberg, head of the Skip Tracers Co., to whom old Slim went with his troubles. "We haven't caught these fellows yet—but we will. You see, usually, when a single individual like old Slim is victimized they don't have the money for an extensive manhunt. On the other hand, when a big company has been taken in by a hoax, it spares no expense in tracking down the racketeers."

Like the band of confidence men the Skip Tracers Co. helped to round up about a year ago in upstate New York. They made a business of cashing in on other people's credit.

They would move into a small town, buy out a reputable store (paying cash on the line for it) and then,

Going Blind, Man First Goes Mad

English Ex-Officer Kills Own Sister and Com-mits Suicide

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—A former army officer, maddened by the gathering of the darkness of total blindness, shot his sleeping sister dead through her "beautiful eyes" Tuesday and then ended his own life by slashing his throat with a razor.

Dr. John Horace Dancy, husband of the victim of the shooting, Dr. Naomi Dancy, 49, a baby specialist, rushed to the bedroom scene of the tragedy and barely missed the bullets fired from the pistol in the hands of Maurice Tribe, 43, invalid former officer.

The husband's mother, also a physician, said Tribe, embittered by failing sight in his one good eye, shouted to his sister "You've got beautiful eyes" and then slew her.

Blame Paid Agents in Pontiac Strike

"Outlaw" Sitdown Strike Ends, and UAW Will Make Probe

DETROIT, Mich.—(P)—Charges that "paid provocateurs" acted in the Pontiac (Mich.) wildcat strike here were made Tuesday as steps were taken to make the newest peace in the automobile labor field a lasting one.

Unidentified outside interests seeking to drum up business for labor spy organizations were blamed.

The United Automobile Workers of America, whose international leaders succeeded in halting an unauthorized strike at the Fisher body plant of General Motors corporation Monday, promised an investigation of the charges.

The charges that "agents provocateurs" had "instigated" the Fisher strike, came from Walter Reuther, member of the union's international executive board.

U.S.A. Ambassador Leaves Capital as Japs Draw Near

Nelson Johnson Withdraws to Hankow, 280 Air Miles Away

CRISIS IN RUSSIA

Soviet Government Angered by Japanese Hint of New War

By the Associated Press

United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and his staff left Nanking Tuesday for the temporary embassy at Hankow as Japanese troops continued to bombard the Chinese defense half-way between Shanghai and the nation's capital.

Hankow is on the Yangtze river in Hupeh province, about 280 air miles from Nanking.

The Brussels Far Eastern conference, in adjournment until Wednesday, was expected on reconvening to vote on a declaration acknowledging the failure of its efforts to end the Chinese-Japanese war.

In Moscow a Soviet protest against a statement by Baron Sadao Araki, Japanese former war minister and member of Japan's high advisory council, that "it probably is necessary to strike directly at Russia" to eliminate Communism in the Far East, was reported by the Tass (official Soviet) news agency.

Russians Angry

MOSCOW, Russia.—(P)—Dmitri V. Bogomoloff was suddenly removed Monday as Soviet ambassador to China after a mysterious flight from Nanking to Moscow. I. Luganets-Orelesky was given the post.

The change surprised diplomats who believed Bogomoloff, when he returned to Moscow by plane late in September, had been called back for important conferences with the Foreign Office on the military and political status of the Chinese-Japanese war.

Rumors were that Maj. Gen. Edward Lepin, Soviet military Attaché at Nanking, also had been replaced because he advised Moscow the Chinese were capable of long resistance against Japan and recent developments made this appear unlikely. General Lepin followed Bogomoloff to Moscow within a few days.

Alleged Japanese and German inspiration of subversive movements among the Russian clergy claimed attention of the official press which accused Germany and Japan of employing Russian church men to organize counter-revolutionary activity.

Many members of Russia's harried priesthood were guilty of espionage, sabotage and terrorism, it was alleged.

The Wild Turkeys That Pilgrims Made Thanksgiving Symbol Are Protected Today to Prevent Hunters Wiping Them Out

This U. S. Forest Ranger has a thankless job, for mountaineer families probably will shoot most of the wild turkeys with which he is preparing to re-stock the Beaver Dam Game Refuge in West Virginia. The turkeys are bred in captivity and released periodically, the forest service never losing hope that some day it may get ahead of the gun-toting mountaineers who defy game laws.

By NEA Service

Chalk up another thankless task for the government—the job of the Forest Service in restocking wooded regions with wild turkeys—the same succulent fowl the Pilgrim fathers established as the official Thanksgiving bird.

Killing wild turkeys was natural two or three centuries ago, with millions roaming the woods. Now they are rapidly disappearing.

Forest Service officials never have been able to persuade residents of back-woods areas that the birds should be protected and not killed indiscriminately.

Establishment of closed seasons, they have learned, means almost exactly nothing to most of the rugged mountaineers who, when they feel like a mess of turkey meat, just go out and shoot a turkey.

One Bright Spot

So the government breeds and raises wild turkeys in captivity, then uses them for re-stocking purposes in the forlorn hope that some will survive long enough to mate and increase the supply.

The one bright spot in the Forest Service's problem is that wild turkeys, hounded by hunters and with their nests and eggs attacked by animals

The "Villain" Machine Actually a Friend

WHAT we are getting into right now may be another depression, a flail-back of the old one or just a mild "seasonal recession," but it is a pretty safe bet that before long someone will be standing upon meeting to blame it all on that old villain, The Machine.

The indictment is familiar to all of us. Work that used to be done by human hands is done nowadays by machines. The hands are idle, and the man who is attached to them is on nobody's payroll. Consequently he is not in the market for the goods the machines produce; consumption fails to keep up with demand, and every so often we get into the direst sort of mess.

But simply to restate the old indictment gets us nowhere. Old Man Machine has been in court periodically for about a decade now, and no one has any very clear idea about what, if anything, should be done. The one certainty is that he is here to stay and that we might just as well make the best of him.

AND since that is true, it is worth while to have a look at the other side of the picture. That may help us to understand that our salvation lies in exploiting the machine to the very utmost rather than in any fruitless attempt to turn the clock back.

A little booklet which shows the machine's rating on the credit side of the ledger has just been produced by the National Machine Tool Builders' Association.

The booklet invites you to go right down the line in your own home and see how the machine has made life easier and less expensive for you. The kitchen, for instance; it is infinitely handier than it was in grandmother's day, and it is the scene of far less drudgery. Why? Because of machinery.

About a dozen years ago the nation was producing some 200,000 electric refrigerators a year. They sold at about $400 apiece. Today, with production stepped up to 2,000,000 a year, the average price is $163—and you get a better refrigerator.

Go down in the basement and look at the washing machine. In 1921 the average washer cost $142; today's machine, which is much better, costs around $65. Or go out in the garage and inspect the family auto—and, as you do, reflect that 30 years ago the auto was a toy for the wealthy, whereas today the average auto-owning family has an income of about $30 a week. In that same period of time, incidentally, the average wage in the auto industry has risen from 25 to 80 cents an hour, and the number of auto workers has jumped from 80,000 to 400,000.

NOW these are not exceptional cases. The same sort of thing is true all along the line. The machine age has made the things we use cheaper, better and more plentiful than they were a generation ago.

And our troubles, perhaps, have come because we have not gone far enough with the machine; not because we have gone too far. Abundance, cheapness, use—our salvation lies there, somewhere, instead of in demands that the machines be restrained.

"Big Push" On Disease

IT IS interesting to note that mass inoculation of Americans in an effort to eradicate pneumonia was discussed the other day at a conference of medical experts with Dr. Thomas Parran, Jr., surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Probably nothing of the kind will actually happen—now. But the mere fact that the proposition is being discussed is a most hopeful indication. The new serum, which is now being given to 300,000 CCC boys must be given strong indications of high value.

Next to heart disease and cancer, pneumonia kills more Americans than any other disease. If medical science is on the verge of finding a new and effective weapon to fight it, a great milestone in the conquest of disease is about to be passed.

Blands of Boy Are Among Factors Controlling Hair's Growth and Health

This is the second in a series in which Dr. Morris Fishbein discusses the hair, its health and care.

(No. 378)

If there is any one subject that disturbs the average man more than any other, it is the gradual disappearance of hair from the top of his scalp.

In a study of baldness in many families, Osborne concluded that early baldness is inherited as a dominant character from father to son. In women, baldness is a recessive character, which explains why women very rarely are inclined to be bald.

There are many factors in the human body which control the growth of the hair. These factors are manifested chiefly through the glands of internal secretion. For instance, there is a substance in the pituitary gland which is believed to be definitely related to body growth and others supposed to be definitely concerned with the growth of the hair.

Eunuchs who have had the male sex glands removed from the body do not become bald, and there is known also to be a definite relationship between the functioning of these glands and the activities of the pituitary gland.

Sometimes excessive dryness of the hair is associated with a lack of activity of the thyroid gland. In people in whom the secretion of the thyroid gland is less than normal, the hair is thin, dry and lusterless and may be prematurely gray. With proper doses of thyroid gland by a physician, the hair and the skin usually improve. When secretion of the thyroid gland is too great, there are, in addition to the usual symptoms, in many instances thinning of the hair over the scalp and sometimes complete baldness.

When there is too much secretion of certain portions of the pituitary gland, superfluous hair may grow on various portions of the body. In women this superfluous hair may occur on the chest, the legs, and sometimes also on the face.

Observers also noticed that this abnormal hair was thick, wavy and oily. However, should the action of the pituitary gland be insufficient, the skin is likely to be smooth, transparent and free from moisture, and there may be a tendency to lack of hair upon the body.

Sometimes when there is a disorder in action of the adrenal glands the effects may be observed in the distribution and character of the hair about the body. This varies with a tendency to either masculinity or femininity as a result of the glandular disorder.

NEXT: Heredity and other causes of baldness.

Teen Age Books Are Adult Fare

This is the fifth of six articles by Olive Roberts Barton in connection with Children's Book Week.

After twelve, the books for children take on such depth of interest and are so meaty as to content, that they make excellent adult reading also. By this I mean that to buy a book for a boy or girl of this age is to buy one for yourself. Content is so entertaining that they should be labeled "twelve to seventy." The only reason we specify an age is because they have a special appeal to the tastes of the growing youth.

Some are mines of knowledge, others fiction typifying the best in human relations and endeavor. But see for yourself. These are recent additions to the child's library, and mothers will be happy, I know, to paste these suggestions in their scrap books.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
ROBERT BARRY—hero, explorer.
MELISSA LANE—heroine, Barry's partner.
HONEY BEE GIRL—Indian, member of Barry's party.
HADES JONES—pioneer, member Barry's party.

Yesterday, Bob begins his exploration of Defiance Castle, drops down over the overhanging cliff and is unable to get back again! He must do something quickly.

CHAPTER V

TO the three people below, Robert Barry looked like a toy doll, a puppet, dangling on the end of the rope stretching 600 feet or more above them.

"What in tarnation's he tryin' to do?" shrieked Hades Jones. Hades was jumping around and chattering more excitedly than either of the two girls. Mary Melissa looked enthralled.

"Oh, I don't know! It's awful, Mr. Jones. Can't you make him stop? Is it necessary to risk his life this way?"

Bob was going through some sort of queer contortions now. He appeared to have looped the rope around his foot, and to be starting a motion of "pumping" as a boy would do in a swing.

But he gathered momentum slowly. He seemed first to swing the wrong way—parallel to the cliff dwelling ledge, rather than toward it—and he had to slow down, then start anew.

He stopped and heaved, struggling for the pendulum motion again. The arc of his swing grew slowly—in-an-out, in-an-out—to and from the red rock. The cliff was so jagged and rough that it appalled Mary Melissa to think of what might happen. In her semi-hysteria she envisioned her business partner slipping, striking the rock and sliding down its steep slope.

The great cliff in which Defiance Castle nestled was really a concave surface, overhanging at the top and curving quickly inward to the "mouth" or cave which had been chosen as a home site by the ancient builders. Below this niche, which was big enough to hold a three-story building, the granite-like wall curved gently outward again, progressing in drops of 20 to 30 feet, broken by vicious-looking scrubby gnarled plants, clung precariously to the wall, although where they found soil for sustenance was a mystery.

On the day when they first saw the cliff, Mary Melissa had commented that it was a fine, theatrical backdrop for a great drama. The ancients had farmed the valley, where this modern exploration party had set up camp. The ancients must have known work and danger and love and excitement and happiness and death centuries ago. The life drama of a kingdom!

The white girl thought of this in a flash again, and instantly realized that she was seeing another dramatic moment here. Only this one was not in retrospect, not for calm historical study. It was tremendously near and real.

She strained to see Bob Barry. The arc of his swing was incredibly large now. And he was still "pumping."

Suddenly she knew his plan. She realized what he hoped to do. "No! Oh no!" She breathed it, almost as a prayer. The distance seemed much too great.

In that instant, Mary Melissa knew that it mattered terribly.

SHE knew that it mattered to her, personally, and irrevocably. She didn't phrase it, even to herself, as love. But she knew. The tightening within her, the actual physical pain in her heart, was keener than it would have been if she saw a casual acquaintance in danger.

In the latter circumstance, she would have screamed. She might have run, and shouted advice, anything in her high alarm. But this feeling was different. Deeper, somehow. In the strain of the moment she touched something divine—and prayed to it, mumbled her petitions without restraint or shame.

More given to physical action in such emergencies, old Hades Jones had abruptly disappeared, running. Frankly, he had no idea what he would accomplish, but he hastened toward the trees at the foot of the great cliff. At least he would be on hand when Bob Barry fell.

Honey Bee Girl, being of a less demonstrative race anyway had uttered no words. She just waited.

But what of Scott Holliman—he who had accompanied Bob to the cliff top and let down the rope?

It hadn't taken his employer long to disappear over the edge of the cliff. Holliman had warned him to be careful, but in Bob Barry was the supreme confidence of young physical strength.

Holliman could see nothing after Bob disappeared. The rim curved precariously for six or eight feet before the edge was reached, and he dared not try to peer over at Bob. He had just let the rope out slowly as instructed, then held it, snubbed, when it was almost gone.

It occurred to him that he hadn't been told when to pull his boss back up. He wasn't sure he could pull him back anyway. The cliff edge was of sharp jagged rock. It would cut into the rope, maybe sever it.

This thought suddenly startled Holliman.

He made sure that his end of the rope was tied, then went as close to the edge as he dared.

"Mr. Barry?" he called.

No answer. Holliman yelled it, but still got no reply. Then he, too, realized that the wind was whipping the sound away. Sudden alarm struck him. He couldn't see Barry, nor communicate with him.

He did peer over far enough to see Hades Jones running. And the two women were moving about and pointing up. But he was unable to deduce anything from that.

He noticed motion in the rope, and quickly grabbed it.

There were slight regular jerks for a bit. Then a swaying pull, first right then left. In alarm he looked at the rocky edge where the rope disappeared. The fiber was indeed beginning to fray!

Holliman strained to pull it up to a fresh spot, lest it be sawed apart. But Barry was a heavy man, and friction at the rock was too great. "Good Lord!" Holliman growled, genuinely alarmed now. He looked desperately around him.

The man felt peculiarly helpless. He did quickly decide to let out a few inches more of rope—there wasn't very much left—and so put a fresh place on the sharp rock edge. That lessened one danger, he felt.

He shouted again and again, but no answer. The alternate tightening of the rope indicated a swinging or swaying. Holliman's alarm mounted.

Then suddenly the rope slackened. Holliman fell back prone with the sudden give of it. He held it then, limp in his hands, and stared at it.

"Uhhnnnn!" he literally groaned in despair, pulling the loose rope up a few feet. Quickly he turned to go back toward their horses.

Today's Pattern

BY CAROL DAY

PRETTY enough to wear as a daytime frock, the lines of Pattern 8086 are extremely flattering. The deep yoke is draped under a trim tab and the set-in sleeves are short and full, puffed into a narrow band cuff. These are details that make this dress wearable for run-around and street as well as for the house. If you prefer a short open sleeve you will find pattern for it included. The waistline is darted to effect a snug line and the skirt is slim and straight. You will use this pattern again and again, this season and next. Make it up in a pretty cotton for wear through the day and in a rayon crepe for street.

Paul Harrison in Hollywood

Sleuth Who Found Film Fame Is Handcuffing His Fortune

HOLLYWOOD.—Phil Regan probably would have been perfectly happy if he had gone right on being a policeman. Even now, with his movie and radio prominence, he figures he will have to manage carefully if his future is to provide any more contentment or security than most policemen have.

"You think that sounds screwy," challenged the singing actor.

"Listen: If I had stayed on the New York force and never even got above a second-grade detective, which I was, I could have retired in 1951, at the age of 45, with a pension of $30 a week. I'd have owned my home and I'd have been healthier than any movie actor of 45 that you can name.

"Thirty bucks doesn't sound like much, in Hollywood. But it takes an investment of about $30,000 to earn even a little income like that. You wouldn't believe how few big people in this town have socked away that much cash.

"We're saving our dough, though. We're not going Hollywood. We're going to have an income of $100 a week! Hey, Jo?" He looked at Mrs. Regan, who is as Irish and pretty as a shamrock, only more freckled. She nodded. "Jo, there—she's responsible for everything," said her husband. "She made me quit my job on the force for radio, and she made me come to Hollywood and try my luck while she and the kids stayed behind and waited until I got a break. Boy! I've sure been lucky!"

Had Them Sniffing
He has been lucky at that, in an Algeresque sort of way. At 13 he had to quit school and drive a team of horses in Brooklyn. He and Jo were married when they both were 17. In a few years he was chauffeur for a judge, and finally realized his greatest ambition by becoming a policeman.

He was still a rookie when he helped solve a murder and arrested the criminal, who was convicted. After that he was Detective Regan.

He was shy about using his voice until the night he was assigned to attend a swanky party, posing as a guest. Some of the people got to singing around a piano, and before he knew it Detective (in a tuxedo) Regan was warbling "I Lost the Hand That Rocked Me to Sleep."

The party broke up in sentimental sniffles and a Columbia Broadcasting executive begged Regan to drop around for an audition.

He dropped around, and, without knowing it, sang in a competitive audition for a spot with Guy Lombardo. "I like to have died," he said, "when they told me who I'd been singing for, and that I could have the job."

Remember "The Romantic Singer of Romantic Songs" with Lombardo on the hour with Burns and Allen? That was handsome young Phil Regan. When the comes came to Hollywood, Regan retained his police commission, and guest-starred. Finally he, too, came here.

Playing Safe
One evening he was a guest of Lombardo at the Coconut Grove. While dancing with Gracie Allen he said something that sent her into whooping hysterics. Everybody stared and laughed and got a good look at Miss Allen's partner. A few minutes later a man came to the table and said that Director Clarence Brown would like to use Mr. Regan in a picture.

The singing cop took a test at Maud next day—a test for a leading role opposite Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee." But on that same afternoon an impatient agent rushed Regan to Warner Brothers, where he signed a contract. After two years he went over to Republic, "Laughing Irish Eyes," "The Hit Parade" and the current "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" are three pictures which have attracted a lot of attention.

"With a big house, a big car and a swimming pool, he's doing all right—but not in the prodigal fashion of Beverly Hills. Regan wants to make sure that, 15 or 20 years from now, he won't be sorry that he didn't stick to his detecting.

As Thanksgiving Draws Near

Thanksgivings came—Thanksgivings go—
Leaving their wistful afterglow.
(As all the hearts in exile know.)
A large and pensive company,
Who think back on the past, are we.
(Wearing our sprig of rosemary.)
Some of us take untrodden ways
To find our lovely yesterdays—
(Wrept 'round with lavender and haze).

Some seek a well-loved face, a smile,
In memory kept a long, long while.
(Thoughts fly for many a mile.)
There is an old house, that for me
Means home, and love and family—
It matters not where I may be.
But for all of us, the same road
Wends—
Close up the gaps, sit closer, friends!
Thanksgivings come—Thanksgivings end!—Selected.

Thanksgiving Day Dance, Elks Hall

"Southwest Swingsters" to Furnish Music for Holiday Affair

What is expected to be the revival of the once-famous Elks dances at Hope will be the homecoming Thanksgiving Day dance at the Elks hall Wednesday night, November 24.

The dance is sponsored by Talbot Field, Jr., of Hope. Indications are that a capacity crowd will attend. The dance has been widely advertised and a large delegation of visitors from surrounding towns plan to attend.

Music will be played by the "Southwest Swingsters," a seven-piece negro orchestra composed of Hope and El Dorado negro musicians.

Starting promptly at 9:30 p. m., the dance will continue until 2 or 2:30 a. m. Thursday.

under the respected name of the man they had bought up, order large quantities of goods from wholesale houses, explaining that they were expanding.

Soon as the goods arrived the confidence men would ship them out of town under the cover of darkness and skip cross-country to buy out another business—and expand.

Where There's a Will—The larger business houses also hardly ever fail to capture the furniture racketeers. This is a popular bit of cheating, but it usually fails.

A young couple of "newlyweds," buy a suite of furniture at a credit house, put down a small sum, and then advertise "forced to leave town must sell brand-new living room and bed room suites at great sacrifice."

"We usually get them in the next town," says Mr. Eisenberg, and with a twinkle, "they truly are 'forced to leave town at a great sacrifice!'"

Where there's a will, there's usually a way for confidence men to make money, according to Mr. Eisenberg.

The con follows the daily legal reports closely until he comes upon a notice to the effect that the will of, say Mr. George Ryan has been probated, the estate valued at $750,000, and the "heirs underlined."

Mr. Confidence Man immediately becomes Mr. Albert Ryan, moves to another city, gleams out-of-town hotel phone directories for addresses of a Ryan or in a half dozen so cities and then writes to these victims that he has investigated the life of Mr. George Ryan and has determined that "you," like myself, are an heir to his estate and legally entitled to share in the distribution. However, my investigation "has exhausted my ready cash and, inasmuch as you will share in the proceeds, I am taking the liberty of asking you to please share in the legal expense."

Sometimes he asks for $50 from each, sometimes $500. He'll take, of course, what he gets.

"And, that usually," says Mr. Eisenberg, "in the long run, is five or ten years."

STORIES IN STAMPS

BECAME A PILLAR OF CHRISTENDOM

STRANGEST of transformations was that which the peasant people of Assisi, Italy, noticed one day in their fellow townsman, Francis, son of the leading cloth merchant.

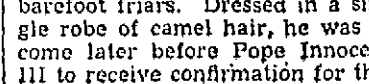

He had been a gay, romantic fellow, given to free spending and dissolute companions. He had served in the army of Assisi in a war with Perugia and for a time was prisoner. And now he was 25 and had suddenly turned from his gay ways. Francis had seen a vision; he had heard Christ.

He sold a load of his father's cloth to raise money for the repair of a small church and there by brought down paternal wrath upon his head. His father went to court about the matter and Francis, in one sweeping gesture, stripped off his worldly garments and donned a peasant's brown cloak upon which he had drawn a crude cross. In that moment his mission had begun.

Forthwith this man consecrated to God established the order of barefoot friars. Dressed in a single robe of camel hair, he was to come later before Pope Innocent III to receive confirmation for this order. In succeeding years his gospel was to travel around the entire medieval world.

Humble, lacking scholarship, utterly poor, Francis grew to become a mighty power and a saint among saints. He was called "another Christ." He died on Oct. 4, 1226, a pillar of Christianity. His death is portrayed on an Italian stamp of 1926.

and snakes, are becoming considerably more wary and harder to find than in the olden days.

So far the best efforts of conservation officials to halt indiscriminate slaying of turkeys have been unavailing. In the back woods areas where they roam, residents cannot be reached with conservation education.

Farmers Need Them For generations, these residents and their forebears have had the right to hunt where and when they pleased. Many don't even know about the game protection laws and wouldn't obey them if they did. In many mountainous regions such as in the Ozarks and the western ranges, game wardens admit that it is impossible to enforce the protection laws.

Officials point out that protection of the wild turkey supply is important not only to prevent extinction of the variety but also to aid agriculture. Biologists consider wild turkeys to be one of the best control elements against grasshoppers, crickets, locusts and other crop-destroying insects. In some regions even their first cousins, the domestic turkeys, have been drafted by farmers to eat insects which were threatening crops.

Bears Formally Named for Bowl

California Will Represent Pacific Coast New Year's Day

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—An announcement as formal as it was unsurprising Monday named California's undefeated Golden Bears as the west's representatives on the Rose Bowl gridiron New Year's day.

Dr. Hugh C. Willett of Southern California, president of the Pacific Coast Conference, made the solemn pronouncement at noon after checking early returns of the annual poll conducted by conference members.

Indicating that some of the members had neglected to participate in the vote, probably on the grounds that California's undefeated march through the western ranks spoke for itself, Dr. Willett said the poll was not complete, but a majority vote was in and California was "in" by a landslide, with no objections.

Now comes a week or more of nationwide guessing over California's choice of an opponent. Graduate Manager Kenneth Priesley followed custom at Berkeley and kept quiet on that question.

He intimated nothing would be decided until after the results of this week's games in which outstanding possibilities play.

Three teams, Alabama, Pitt and Fordham stand out at probable candidates, with Dartmouth an added but seemingly forlorn hope. Of the group, Alabama boasts the only undefeated, untied record. But the Crimson Tide must dispose of Vanderbilt Thanksgiving Day.

Pittsburgh, 1937 Rose Bowl champions by virtue of their victory over Washington, faces Duke, a tough assignment, this Saturday, and Fordham meets the outfit that sank its Rose Bowl hopes last year, New York University.

Pitt and the Rams played their third successive 0-0 tie last month, which is the only blot on their respective records. Dartmouth, undefeated but tied by

Thanksgiving, Time to Ignore Calories and High Food Prices

The Alexandra Room Steamed Fig puddings await the blessing of white brandied hard sauce—a perfectly suited companionship.

NEA Service Staff Writer

On Thursday, the 25th of November, we'll take time out from fighting the High Cost of Living and have a feast of thanksgiving because prices aren't any higher. They might have been, you know. So as we plan our Thanksgiving dinner, let's sing a song of plenty.

I stopped in a ask Louis Cintrat, chef of a well known restaurant, what he had to say about cooking the turkey this year. "I'd select a 15-pound bird," he said, "and I'd roast it for 3 hours. During the first 2½ hours I'd keep the pan covered, but during the last half hour, then the pan would be uncovered so the bird could turn a delicious, crispy brown." Chef Cintrat's Turkey Stuffing

Homecoming for Reddies Thursday

Henderson State Entertains State Teachers at Arkadelphia

Henderson State Teachers College, Arkadelphia, will celebrate its annual homecoming on Thanksgiving Day, when hundreds of former students and friends of the college are expected to return for the day and renew old acquaintances and friendships. A series of events has been planned for the celebration.

The climax of the activities will be reached in the afternoon of Thanksgiving day when the "Reddies" of Henderson State engage the "Bears" of Arkansas State Teachers College, Conway, in a football game on Haywood field.

Following a precedent which was established many years ago in the college, the night before the Homecoming Day will be devoted to a big pep meeting, which will be held in the Henderson auditorium. A parade is scheduled for Thanksgiving morning, and the annual Victory Banquet will be held in the college dining hall following the game. A dance is scheduled to conclude the activities of the celebration.

Rev. Bert Webb Is Kiwanis Speaker

Pastor Appeals for United Thanks for Our Many Blessings

With several notions of the earth warring with each other and still others in the throes of dictatorship and bitter political strife, we as Americans should pause on this—the approach of Thanksgiving—and give thanks to Almighty God for all our blessings, the Rev. Bert Webb told the Hope Kiwanis club at its luncheon meeting Tuesday noon.

"Check up on yourself. See if you can't find something to be thankful for. As we approach Thanksgiving, we should remember the very first Thanksgiving when our forefathers of the Eastern coast met for the specific purpose of expressing gratitude to God for the harvest that carried them through the winter and saved them from starvation.

"Thanksgiving should be a religious day with us—a day that is in order for us to stop and give thanks to our Lord for life, liberty, health, all our personal belongings and for the privilege of living in a free and independent nation.

"We have churches on every corner—but we as Americans—are one of the most careless nations when it comes to religion. Let's stop on Thanksgiving Day and express our thanks to Almighty God for the many things He has made possible," the Rev. Mr. Webb appealed.

The civic club discussed plans to decorate the business section of town with brilliant-colored lights for the Christmas buying season. It was decided that approximately $200 was needed to replace bulbs and to install the lighting system across intersections of the downtown area.

A committee will canvass merchants early next week for donations. The lighting system will be erected the latter part of next week with the municipal plant furnishing electricity.

The club voted to appeal through the press for toys to be distributed to underprivileged children at Christmas time. Persons having broken or old toys are asked to bring them to the fire station where they will be repainted and distributed at Christmas.

time.
Joe Floyd was appointed program chairman of the club, replacing M. Loe who has moved from Hope to Corpus Christi, Texas.

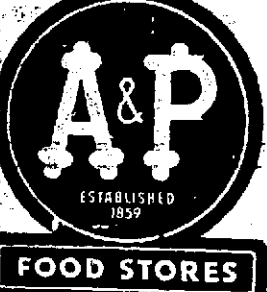

The club voted to return to Capital hotel for weekly luncheon meetings. For the past several weeks the club has met in the cottage of First Christian church.

Roast Gets Saucy for Thanksgiving

Piquant Concoction Brings Out Best Flavor of the Meat

By NEA Service
A well-dressed roast likes a bit of sauce in its grooming. Not too much, understand, for the roast doesn't care to have attention taken away from its own charms. But just enough to play up the occasion.

Garden Sauce
One cup water in which vegetables were cooked, 2 tablespoons flour, 3/4 tablespoon butter, 1 cup sour cream.

Tomorrow's Menu
Breakfast: Steamed prunes with cranberries, mixed hot cereal, Canadian bacon, raisin toast, coffee, milk.

Luncheon: Cream of tomato soup, toasted English muffins, hot gingerbread, whipped cream, tea, milk.

Dinner: Roast leg of lamb, Bermuda sauce, roasted potatoes, buttered broccoli, romaine salad, macaroni-apple fluff, coffee, milk.

2 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper, and a pinch of nutmeg.

Heat 2 tablespoons butter, stir in flour. When blended, stir in sour cream and the vegetable water. Simmer for about 15 minutes, then add another 1/4 tablespoons butter and the remaining ingredients. Stir carefully and serve very hot on broiled lamb chops.

Bermuda is a lively spot, with friendly people and a restful outlook where ever you stand. On my most recent visit there, I picked up this fine sauce which they serve with roast leg of lamb.

Bermuda Lamb Sauce
One carrot, 3 stalks celery, 2 leeks 1 onion, 2 tablespoons minced raw ham, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 bay leaf, pinch of thyme, 1 pint meat stock, 1/2 cup strained canned tomatoes, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 3/4 tablespoon prepared mustard, 1 tablespoon mushroom sauce and 1/2 cup cherry wine.

Chop all vegetables. Heat butter, add minced raw ham, thyme and bay leaf. Cook 3 minutes, then add stock and strained canned tomatoes. Simmer over very low fire for half an hour, then make thickening. Combine melted butter and flour, add mustard and seasoning, then add to sauce, simmer a few minutes, then add sherry and serve with perfectly browned roast leg of lamb.

Veal often calls for a sauce with definite character. Try this when such a call comes.

Anchovy Sauce
Twelve skinned and boned anchovies, 3 tablespoons butter, pinch salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, dash cayenne pepper, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 cup clear veal stock made from trimmings from roast.

Mash anchovies. Heat butter, add mashed anchovies, salt, pepper and cayenne. Simmer very gently for 2 minutes. Stir in sifted flour, and continue to stir, add the veal stock. Simmer another 5 minutes, then serve on roast shoulder of veal.

Modern Cooling System
Tenant: "Janitor, you would cool our apartment nicely if you would run ice water through the radiators."
Janitor: "Can't be done, madam."
Tenant: "Well, what did you have in them last winter?"

Appreciative
Hostess: It looks like a storm, you had better stay for dinner.
Guest: Oh, thanks, but I don't think it's bad enough for that.

Green-Yolked Eggs Produced in Hope

Feeders Supply Co. Proves Ration Controls Color of Yolk

An interesting poultry experiment which is said to prove that egg production can be controlled even to the point of producing green-yolked eggs on a given ration, is under way at the Feeders Supply company store, opposite Hope Star office on South Walnut street.

Eight hens—six white leghorns and two hybrids—were hatched March 1, and commenced laying August 1, five months later.

The first 20 days of November the eight hens laid 107 eggs—against the national American average of only 80 eggs per hen for an entire year.

Two of the hens, fed a special ration, are regularly producing green-yolked eggs.

Purina laboratories are authority for the statement that by simply varying their feed hens are able to produce yolks in shades ranging from bright red, orange, blue, purple, brown, black, white, to green.

Rosston, Okolona Win Cage Tourney

Invitational Meet Is Held at Rosston Saturday Night

By CLIFTON BURNS
ROSSTON, Ark.—Rosston boys and Okolona girls won an invitational basketball tournament here Saturday night in the finals against Willisville and Rosston respectively.

In the boys' game L. Jarvis took the tip at center and scored the winning basket for Rosston while Greene broke the ice for Willisville. Although both teams started the game playing ball Rosston took a slight lead in the first quarter 5 to 8.

The second quarter was the hottest of the game. Each team took the lead by turns, but when the game was half over Rosston was again in the lead.

Simpson for Willisville started the scoring in the second half. Rosston kept a slight lead through the rest of the game, but only by the most supreme effort were they able to do so.

The final score was 23-19. Greene for Willisville was high point man scoring 10 points. Forbes scored 6 for Rosston.

Rosston drew a bye and played Cale to reach the finals while Willisville defeated Bodecaw and Boughn.

The girls game got off to a high speed start when Cox for Okolona looped the first bagger to start the scoring. Every player was on her toes and doing her part. In the opening minutes of play no odds were offered on either side. At the end of the first quarter the score was tied 6-6.

Okolona slipped ahead in the second quarter despite the desperate work of Rosston's guards.

Rosston started a rally in the third quarter that almost won them the game even in the closing minutes. The final score was 21-25 for Okolona.

McGowan for Okolona copped the high point honors by scoring 12 points while Dillard for Rosston was close behind with 11 points.

Okolona won over Central and Willisville girls to enter the finals while Rosston played Bodecaw and Boughn.

The schools represented were: Bodecaw, Boughn, Cale, Central, Okolona, Rosston and Willisville. Homer Weathers was referee.

Dimming Lights Prevents Crashes

Heaviest Accident Toll Taken During Night Driving

By the State Highway Dept.

Of the 37,800 traffic fatalities in 1936, two-thirds happened at night when only one-third of the day's traffic was on the road. When traffic is the lightest, the death toll is the heaviest. These figures are released in an effort to call the public's attention to the seriousness of night driving, and to emphasize a few hints that, when put into practice, will result in a noticeable reduction of traffic accidents at night.

One of the finest acts of courtesy a driver can do is to dim his headlights when approaching another motorist on the highway. On the other hand, failing to do this simple thing is a rank discourtesy, as well as being a violation of the law, and has been the cause of a great number of our more serious fatal accidents. This type of night accidents is entirely avoidable, inasmuch as dimming the headlights requires so little physical effort.

Another cause of night accidents is driving at an excess rate of speed, and this, together with failure to dim the lights, creates a perfect layout for an accident. "Slow down when the sun goes down!"

So They Say

If there were more Alexander Hamiltons in Washington we would have the confused state of government in which we are making expenditures of money that we are not receiving—Senator Carter Glass, Virginia.

The Red Army is for peace, but we are ready to beat off any enemy attack.—Marshall Klement Voroshiloff, Moscow.

Half truth can be defeated with the whole truth.—Herbert Hoover's prescription to counteract propaganda.

I want a job on a newspaper or selling. No politics for me.—Robert Harold Leikes, son of the Interior Secretary.

My writer feels he has finished a book when he has written it. He wants it read.—Pearl Buck.

The first skull of the so-called Neanderthal Man was discovered in 1856 in Germany.
